Frightful Death Near Mammoth Spring of An Alleged Whitecapper.

Desparate Three Cornered Battle in Cleveland County in Which Two of the Participants Were Fatally, and One Seriously Wounded.

Alleged Whitecapper Killed.

A dispatch from Mammoth Spring tells of the killing by Harve Sexton of Pink Gibson, a member of a party of whitecappers. It is alleged Sexton was the associate of a woman, who lived a few miles from Mammoth Spring. Both were warned to leave by the regulators after the woman had terribly whipped. Sexton went to his home to secure his gun and because his boy would not tell him where his gun was he gave him a whipping. Sexton's wife swore out a peace warrant for him, and Pink Gibson took several young men and went in search of him. Not finding Sexton at the house of the woman mentioned, they blew it up with dynamite, and went to the Webb place, where Sexton was found. Sexton went upstairs, and as Gibson, throughout the state. Col. James Newton Smithee was born in Sharp county, Arkansas, January 11, 1842, of Scotch-Irish parentage, and his paturnal grand-father was a soldier in the revolutionary war. His father, a native of Tennessee, was a farm-Col. James Newton Smithee was er by occupation, and his mother was a native of Hilmols and a daughter of Rev. John Woodrum, of Virginia, a promient Baptist minister. The son's education consisted of a three months attendance at a country school, and until his twelfth year he worked on his father's farm. He was then apprenticed to the publisher of a country newspaper, the Des Arc Citizen, and for four years worked for his board and clothes, learning the trade of printer and compositor. When about 18 years of age he purchased a half interest in the Prairie County Democrat, of Brownsville, and conducted it in support of Breckinridge and Lane in the presidential campaign of 1860. On the secession of South Carolina he sold his interest in the paper and ardently espoused the southern cause. In February, 1861, he aided in the seizure of the United States arsenal at Little Rock, and in March was with the expedition which captured Fort Smith. When Arkansas seceded he was mustered into the Confederate service as a private in Woodruff's battery, May 21, 1861, and in May, 1855, he surrendered, being at that time first Houtenant and adjutant in Blocker's Trans-Mississippi battallon of artillery. He participated in all the leading battles of that department and was wounded at Helena, July 4, 1863. At the close of the war he resumed his trade of typesetting in Memphis, but in November, 1866, he returned to Lattle Reck and became the foreman in the office of the Daily Arkansas Gazette. During the eight succeeding years he was connected with the paper, becoming city editor, managing editor, and mally proprietor. He took an active part in the celebrated Brooks-Baxter war, in April and May, 1874, serving on the staff of tovernor Baxter, with the rank of colonel, and upon the overtherw of the Brooks faction and J. In Some Places It Has Equaled That of the Year of the Johnstown Flood.

THE RAILROADS SUFFERED SEVERELY.

Thousands of Acres of Bottom Lands Under Water, and in Some Portions of the Mohawk Valley the Farmers Have Lost Nearly All of Their Crops.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 8 .- A message received here, Sunday, from Belfast, below Portageville, on the Rochester branch of the Pennsylvania, says the flood there equaled the deluge in the year of the Johnstown flood. Loss of life at Belfast had been reported, but the message made no mention of any casualties. At the offices of the Erie railroad the following statement was given:

"On our main line between Buffalo and Hornellsville, our east-bound track was slightly damaged between Dale and Warsaw, and our westbound track between Swain's and Canaseraga. We are getting our trains through at these points by using a single track. We expect to have both tracks open for traffic this afternoon,."

At the office of the Pennsylvania railroad it was stated that all of their lines were open except the Rochester division, Hinsdale to Rochester.
